

Thesis assessment criteria

Medical Science Doctoral Program

1. The thesis is research, conducted solely by the candidate.
2. The thesis contributes to the advancement of medicine and has a high academic significance.
3. The thesis has discernable, novelty, creativity, originality and measures international criteria.
4. The thesis is based on a research plan making use of highly specialized knowledge and skills.
5. The research in the thesis is conducted in compliance with research ethics.
6. The research results in the thesis are logically and properly valued, and lead to a conclusion.
7. The candidate has academic expertise and a developed sense of ethics.
8. The candidate has the ability to construct and carry out research plans based on research results and topics.
9. The candidate has a distinct vision on developments in his field of research.
10. The candidate is highly skilled in presenting his research results and topics.

Medical Science Master Program

1. The thesis is research, conducted solely by the candidate.
2. The thesis has a high academic significance.
3. The topic of the thesis is appropriate, the research methods and argumentation are valid.
4. The research results in the thesis are logically and properly valued, while problematic points and topics are identified and research result lead correctly to a conclusion.
5. The research results of the thesis contribute to the advancement of the field of research.
6. The candidate has a broad knowledge on medical science, and a developed sense of ethics.
7. The candidate is familiar with research methods and the style for writing a paper.
8. The candidate is has the ability to talk, whit the appropriate vocabulary, about his research resu lts and topics.